Rosen Hagood Supports City of Charleston's First Day Festival

August 10, 2012

Charleston-based law firm, Rosen Hagood, is proud to support the First Day Festival, organized by the City of Charleston. The firm collected items for the school supply drive, functioned as a drop-off point for supplies being collected through the South Carolina Bar's Young Lawyers Division, and also made a monetary contribution.

"When asked to support the schoolchildren of Charleston, we absolutely wanted to be a part of the First Day Festival," said Andrew Gowdown, an attorney with the firm and board member of Charleston Volunteers for Literacy.

Rosen Hagood focuses on obtaining superior results for its clients with complex litigation and damages claims in the areas of business and commercial litigation, construction, products liability, wrongful death, traumatic brain injury, personal injury, employment, and family law.
